Name of Website: LetsGoGaming

Description of topic: I want to make a website about video games and links that could lead to those videos. Think of this website or the topic of gaming websites as an external resource that can lead other people to new games or genres they may not have even thought of. When you click on a "popular now" game, it will display what the game is about and the website to get the game. It will also display prices of the games and eventually hopefully have a save feature where you save your games in a library to think about purchasing them. It's a wide concept, but I hope it is at least a good blueprint for now.

Page names: Home, About us, Genres, History, and Communities

As described in my topic a tool you could use is "Save" so you can save games in your library and store the games you think you would want later. Another tool would be "Remind" where if a person wants to know if the game is on sale on a website they can have a reminder sent to their email since they would probably use an email to login.
